I did not gather them, butlef them under the snow till the spring of 1886, foul the lodians had been there and taken all the crop and had planted potatoes for a new crop. In the full they came and told me to get off the land, it belonged to them. They stole all my implements and household things, and damaged me for $150. My place was a beaver meadow, good ground, for cultivating, hunting and trapping for two or three families. They went to see the Governent Agent, but did not further trouble me.
